授業の目標 (Course Objectives)

This course introduces the major content areas of cultural psychology. Students will learn how culture shapes the way we think and behave.

授業の内容 (Course Contents)

This course will cover the relationship between culture and human mind. The course starts by introducing general theories and perspectives underlying cultural psychology. We will then explore cultural influences on a wide range of psychological processes, including socialization, self-concept, motivation, emotion, and cognition, especially focusing on East-West differences. We will deal with the mechanisms underlying cultural differences and cover topics such as acculturation and multiculturalism, including cultural differences within a single country.

授業計画 (Course Schedule)

1. Introduction: What is cultural psychology?
2. Culture and socialization I: Development of the cultural mind
3. Culture and socialization II: Education practices
4. Culture and the self I: Cultural differences in self-concepts
5. Culture and the self II: Consequences for self-consistency and egoism
6. Culture and motivation I: Goals and theories underlying motivation
7. Culture and motivation II: Cultural differences in motivation, control, and choice
8. Exam 1: Midterm test
9. Culture and emotion: Theories behind universality and cultural variation in emotions
10. Culture and cognition I: Cultural differences in cognition
11. Culture and cognition II: Where do cultural differences come from?
12. Acculturation and biculturalism I: Time course of acculturation and factors that influence acculturation
13. Acculturation and biculturalism II: The bicultural self
14. Exam 2: Final test

授業時間外(予習・復習等)の学習 (Study Required Outside of Class)

Students should review their notes before each class and be prepared to explain the major concepts and theories they have learned. If they are unclear about anything, I would strongly recommend that they should contact the instructor or refer to the corresponding chapter in the reading book. Students are encouraged to take a look at the handouts before each class. Students are required to do the assigned readings and submit a couple of papers during the term.

成績評価方法・基準 (Evaluation)

その他 (HP 等) (Others(e.g.HP))

English will basically be used throughout this course. Students who are not sure if they can catch up, they should come to the first class and notify the instructor.

This course primarily takes lecture-based teaching using PowerPoint slides, but students will join group discussions and experience short psychological experiments and share their results in several classes.

PowerPoint slides will be uploaded on Blackboard.

All of students' papers will be returned with instructor's feedback.
