授業の目標 (Course Objectives)

Students explore how “knowledge” is created, disseminated, and replicated in society for the following objectives:

- a) To gain a deeper insight into what constitutes knowledge,
- b) To learn how it impacts our perspectives, beliefs, and values, and
- c) To understand the limitations of knowledge making processes

授業の内容 (Course Contents)

In this project-based course, students will learn about one epistemological orientation (i.e., interpretivism) and conduct a hands-on qualitative study (i.e., interview research). To experience knowledge making processes and understand its limitations, students will study basic principles of interview research, choose a research topic, conduct an interview, analyze data, and present results.
